ALUMNI PROVIDE $20,000 IN GRANTS

In the January 24 issue of FOLIO, an announcement appeared inviting applications from projects in need of funds. Money was available, the announcement stated, for projects of the sort not normally funded from University operating budgets. The new source of money was the Alma Mater Fund, which comes from alumni contributions.

There was no lack of response to the invitation. Requests came from both individuals and groups. The proposed projects included a request for taxi fare, for funds for a country-wide display of art by University of Alberta students, for assistance in a teach-in, and so on. The amounts requested ranged from $27 to $15,000.

The Alma Mater Fund has replaced the Development Fund and, in a sense, the 3AU Fund (which has been extended to 1976) as the principal fund to which alumni can contribute.

The new fund, according to LORNE MAC PHERSON, Fund Development Officer, has encouraged projects of a different nature. Generally, says Mr. MacPherson, grants are made to projects which benefit as many people as possible, both on- and off-campus. Fairly specific proposals stand a better chance of favorable consideration as well. The whole point of the fund, he says, is to utilize alumni contributions in a meaningful way—to both them and the University.

Allocation of monies is decided by the Alma Mater Fund Committee which consists of the Fund Chairman, the President of the Alumni Association, the Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, the Vice-President (Finance and Administration), and the Fund Development Officer.

The committee has just made its first selections, taken from the applications received since January. The awards reflect the diversity of the applications. JANE MACDONALD, a student in Rehabilitation Medicine at the University, received $27 to help defray costs incurred in her weekly trips to Cromdale School in Edmonton, where she provides speech therapy to elementary students. The University of Alberta Mixed Chorus received $2,000 to help cover costs of a tour this year. The Department of Drama was given $1,250 to help support its new Playwright-in-Residence program, a program also supported by the Clifford E. Lee Foundation and the Canada Council. The Department of Sociology was awarded $500 as seed money to help establish The Canadian Journal of Sociology, which will begin appearing in 1975.

The Student Awards Office received $1,000 to establish two matriculation bursaries for high school students entering the University. In making its application, the Awards Office stated that "last year, due to limited awards, we were unable to ensure an award for anyone with less than a 90 percent average." The bursaries will be continued on an annual basis.

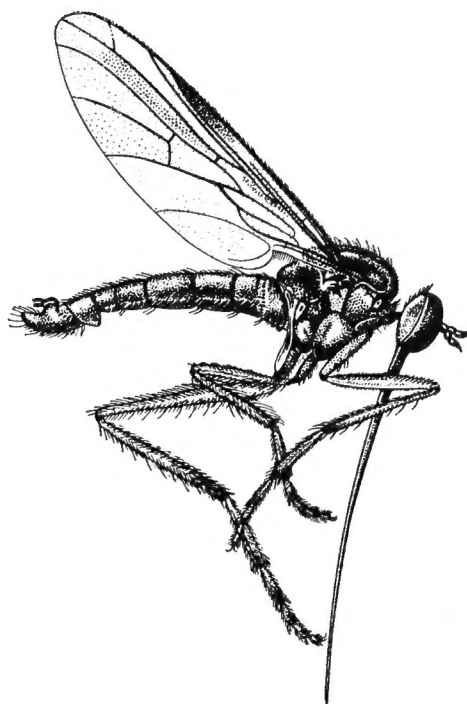

There were many other grants awarded—to Physical Education, to the University Parish, to the Newman Community, to the Graduate Students' Association, and to other groups. The total amount granted approaches $20,000, including funds specifically designated by alumni to Graduate Students' Assistance, the Librarian's Special Book Fund, the Boreal Institute for Northern Studies, and the Centre for the Study of Mental Retardation. Some funds were retained for allocation to projects later in the year.

Canadian universities do not have the same tradition of large, frequent alumni giving that American universities have, says Mr. MacPherson. "But we're not complaining, either. University of Alberta alumni have given over $500,000 to the 3AU Fund, and annual contributions to the Development Fund have been more than $30,000. We expect contributions to the Alma Mater Fund to increase dramatically this year as more alumni pledging support to the 3AU Fund finished their annual payments in 1973 and will be approached to contribute to the Alma Mater Fund.

"Still," he adds, "it's hard to convince a person who graduated in, say, '68 with a BA that, against (the University's) $73 million annual operating budget, his $10 contribution is going to mean something. But it does."

It's the $10 to $25 and $50 contributions which constitute the Alma Mater Fund. From them come the awards which give an added dimension to University activities, which demonstrate tangibly that a university is a human place. And that is a role which the Alma Mater Fund hopes to fulfill for some time to come.

The illustrations of an adult Diptera and Diptera larvae at left and on the monthly calendar (pages 4 and 5) have been reproduced from "The Historical Development of Diptera," an established Russian work by Boris Rohdendorf. The work was first published in 1964 in the Transactions of the Institute of Paleontology, Academy of Sciences of the USSR. It now has been translated into English and is soon to be published by The University of Alberta Press. "Diptera" was edited by the late BRIAN HOCKING, former Chairman of the Department of Entomology, HAROLD OLDROYD of the British Museum (Natural History) in London, and GEORGE E. BALI, Professor and Chairman of Entomology. The August monthly calendar will feature illustrations of adult Diptera.
